SECTION 1 – About the New Forest National Park

The New Forest is a member of the exclusive family of the world's most outstanding landscapes. Globally, there are 6,555 protected areas covering one million square kilometres. The New Forest is one of 15 national parks in the UK. It was designated a National Park in 2005 and took on its full statutory functions a year later.

The New Forest National Park lies mainly in south-west Hampshire – from east of the Avon Valley to Southampton Water and from the Solent coast to the edge of the Wiltshire chalk downs. While it has the smallest area of the UK national parks (57,086 hectares), it has the second largest population living within its boundaries (34,400 people) and it is thought to attract around 15.2 million visitors each year.

The New Forest has long been recognised as a special and important area that needs protection. National Park designation means the strongest possible level of protection for the future which is especially important in the south and south-east where development pressures are intense and on the increase.

Its unique landscape has been shaped over the centuries by grazing ponies, cattle and pigs which roam free. Majestic woodlands, rare heathland and a spectacular coastline provide fabulous opportunities for quiet recreation, enjoyment and discovery.

SECTION 2 – The New Forest National Park Authority

The New Forest National Park Authority is an independent organisation operating in a local government framework and funded by central government. It has 22 members who have overall responsibility for making decisions, for setting policies and priorities and for making sure that resources are used properly.

Purposes

As guardians of a national park the New Forest National Park Authority has two statutory purposes as specified in the Environment Act 1995:

- To conserve and enhance the natural beauty, wildlife and cultural heritage of the area
- To promote opportunities for the understanding and enjoyment of the special qualities of the Park by the public

Working in partnership with other organisations it is also the Authority's duty to seek to foster the economic and social well-being of the local communities with the National Park.

We like to sum this up as: Protect – Enjoy – Prosper
